The Refuge System mission: "To administer a national network of lands and waters for the conservation, management, and where appropriate, restoration of the fish, wildlife and plant resources and their habitats within the United States for the benefit of present and future generations of Americans."

From the migration of monarch butterflies to an influx of sandhill cranes, refuges turn natural events into festival celebrations, especially during National Wildlife Refuge Week, the second full week each October. Look for Special Events under the "Visitors" tab at http://www.fws.gov/refuges/.

Conservation Dollars at Work: Duck Stamps

Since 1934, hunters have been required to purchase a Federal Migratory Bird Hunting and Conservation Stamp – a Duck Stamp – to hunt migratory waterfowl on national wildlife refuges. Duck Stamps are vital for wetland conservation.

Ninety-eight cents of every dollar generated from sales of the Duck Stamp goes to purchase or lease wetland habitat for the National Wildlife Refuge System. Since the Stamp's inception, more than $700 million have been raised to acquire more than 5.2 million acres of habitat to conserve America's fish and wildlife resources.

Today, not only hunters, but also birdwatchers, outdoor enthusiasts, stamp collectors and conservationists buy the Federal Migratory Bird Hunting and Conservation Stamp to support land conservation. The Duck Stamp can also be refuges that charge a fee. At least 80 percent of all fees collected at a refuge are invested in that refuge to provide quality recreational facilities and opportunities to visitors.

From one-ton bison to half-ounce warblers, the National Wildlife Refuge System is America in its most natural state, habitat that is both protected and flourishing. The Refuge System manages a network of lands and waters for the conservation, management, and where appropriate, restoration of fish, wildlife and plant resources – and their habitats.

- Wildlife refuges are home to more than 700 species of birds, 220 species of mammals, 250 reptile and amphibian species and hundreds of
- species of fish. ■ Each year, millions of migratory birds use refuges as stepping stones while they fly thousands of miles between their summer and
- winter homes. ■ More than 380 of the nearly 1,375 federallylisted threatened or endangered species in the U.S. find their homes on units of the Refuge

The National Wildlife Refuge System maintains the biological integrity, diversity and environmental health of America's natural resources for the benefit of present and future generations.

How to Find a National Wildlife Refuge

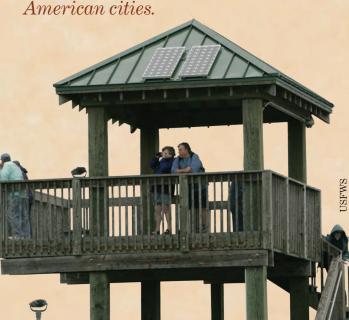

There is at least one wildlife refuge in every state and one within an hour's drive of most major cities – offering welcoming, safe and accessible places to reconnect with the land and refresh your spirit. More than 100 wildlife refuges are within 25 miles of major urban areas.

Perhaps the easiest way to get information about wildlife refuges is to visit the National Wildlife Refuge System Web site at http://www.fws.gov/ refuges/. There, you will see a national map. Click on the state you want to visit and then on a refuge. The link will take you to a page of information, including the hours when a refuge is open and the visitor experiences it has to offer. The page also includes directions and a link to get door-to-door
